

Fashion Scoops: The Bigger Picture... Pulverized... Picture This...

✉email 🖨print 💾save

1 2 3

Published: Monday, February 04, 2008

THE BIGGER PICTURE: The Super Bowl isn't the only American event conflicting with New York Fashion Week, as viewers at the Charles Nolan show reminded the fashion set with buttons supporting Barack Obama. Nolan's partner, Democratic party big shot Andrew Tobias, brought in a bevy of his fellow faithful, including Peggy Kerry, sister of John. "We're wearing the buttons because it's two days before the primary, and it's an important statement: There are Obama supporters in New York," Kerry said. She and Lisa Gans, an international lawyer back in New York for a few months before returning to Afghanistan in March, both walked in Nolan's show last year, and Gans gave her approval to the first lady-friendly collection. "Back in Afganistan, everything has to be long," she said. "I was very excited to see outfits that I could take back with me and wear without being stoned."